TURKEY HUNTER SPENDS 20 HOURS BURIED IN MUD!

By DICK DONOVAN / Staff writer

Die-hard turkey hunter George Zubeck wriggled like a worm on a hook and shouted himself hoarse for 20 nightmarish hours before loggers chanced to find him — trapped up to his waist in a sea of mud!

And throughout his long night of terror, the 39-year-old outdoorsman was haunted by the dilemma that if he struggled too hard the muck would suck him down to a death too horrible to imagine.

George, a delivery driver who lives in Leisenring, Pa., said he was cruising for turkey on state game lands about 45 miles southeast of Pittsburgh, when the "solid" ground under him suddenly became a gooey bog that could snuff out his life like a candle.

"It looked like it was solid ground," George explained. "But, before I knew what was happening, I was up to my knees in mud. Then I was up to my thighs. Before long, I was waist deep.

"I thought, 'How stupid are you to get yourself into this!' And my next thought was, 'How are you going to get yourself out of this?' I knew if I tried to dig myself out, it would only get worse."

George wisely decided it would be a lot safer to stay as calm and still as possible while calling out for help at the top of his lungs. But there was no one in the woods that might be hear him.

Then early the following morning, after enduring 20 hours in the deadly embrace of a gooey muck pit that almost became his grave, George was finally found by a crew of loggers.

Firefighters were called to the rescue. Cleverly using plywood boards to distribute their weight over the mud, they managed to make their way out to George and pull him free. In less than three hours, covered with mud from head to foot, he was flown by helicopter to a Pittsburgh hospital where he was treated for hypothermia. Then he finally took a much-needed shower!

"When I was stuck out there in the mud, I made a pledge that if I made it out OK I was through turkey hunting," George admitted. "But I think I'll go again. Turkey hunting is in my blood."

LIPOSUCTION NIGHTMARE!

'A stupid plastic surgeon sucked my lips off,' says Chicago widow

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

Tragic Tina Adams went to a cut rate plastic surgery clinic for liposuction — and a dumb doc sucked her lips off!

Incredibly, a physician at the New Youth Plastic Surgery Clinic in Karachi, Pakistan, thought liposuction involved the removal of lip tissue. It is actually a process in which fat is sucktioned off the thighs, abdomen or other flabby areas.

"My looks are ruined, my life is ruined and doctors tell me there's nothing I can do about it," said Tina, a 57-year-old Chicago widow who works for a relief agency in Pakistan.

"I look like I have a death grimace and my gums are always dry. I've got a big problem with insects getting into my mouth."

Tina says she decided liposuction, a common procedure in the U.S., would be an easy, permanent way for her to slim her chubby thighs and lose her pot belly. So she made an appointment at the clinic.

The mother of two grown daughters says she explained to clinic employees that she wanted liposuction and was given an interview with a Dr. Mohammad Kazi.

"He looked like he understood what I wanted, but there were some language difficulties because Dr. Kazi spoke really bad English," Tina recalled. "Still, since he was in the plastic surgery business, it never occurred to me he wouldn't know what liposuction was."

Tina was given a general anesthesia — and woke up with the horrifying feeling that something was terribly wrong. Her thighs and abdomen hadn't been touched and there were bandages on her mouth.

The panicked patient called immediately for Dr. Kazi and tried to find out what had happened. In butchered English, the doctor explained he had sucked her lips off as she had wished.

"He thought it was some kind of weird American fad to have your lips taken off. And since I was willing to pay so much money he figured he'd do what I wanted me not

BEFORE her tragic operation, Tina Adams had a beautiful smile.

ADOLF HITLER DIES OF HEART ATTACK!

By RICK TRACY / Correspondent

A massive heart attack has claimed the life of Adolf Hitler, the Nazi dictator who destroyed much of Europe trying to conquer the world a half century ago. He was 103 years old.

President Bush sends CIA experts to confirm death of 103 year old dictator!

Those who were with the aging and arrogant Führer at the end said he didn't apologize for his unspeakable acts which led to the extermination of 6 million Jews during World War II.

"On the contrary. He pleaded with the Nazi Party would or groups who believe in white supremacy to continue to build a Master Race," said one of his closest aides, Dr. Klaus Steiner.

Hitler died at 2:30 p.m. on April 14, according to a press release and photo of the corpse issued by Steiner and hand-delivered to a newspaper in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

President Bush reportedly has sent CIA experts to Buenos Aires to view the body and verify that it is actually Hitler's.

Once the most powerful leader in all the world, Hitler died a frail old man who spent his final year reading and painting watercolors in a heavily-guarded mountain fortress 150 miles from Buenos Aires.

Hitler had been captured in September of 1990 as he tried

Werner Schmedt of Indianapolis, Ind., produced well-documented proof a year ago that he was the illegitimate product of Hitler's relationship with Geli Raubal in 1929.

he is writing about his relationship with his infamous father.

FAMILY OF 4 VANISHES IN CARNIVAL FUN HOUSE!

By ROGER STEELE, Special to The NEWS

Police are baffled by the disappearance of a family of four who walked into a carnival fun house and never came out!

Georg and Lillian Moser, and their two children haven't been seen or heard from since they entered the popular attraction while visiting Lueger Bros. Carnival in Linz, Austria, Police Lt. Friedrich Dragon said.

Arresting in the top, foul play was initially suspected but was quickly ruled out.

The only clue they have in the mysterious disappearance is Mrs. Moser's purse, which was found behind a mirror in the middle of the fun house.

"We're stumped," Lt. Dragon told reporters. "The purse was still full of cash when we found it. But there wasn't a clue to what happened to these people. It's like they vanished off the face of the Earth."

Franz Brebart, who operates the 1,375-square-foot fun house, said the 36-year-old couple, their 8-year-old daughter and 12-year-old son arrived in broad daylight about 10 minutes after the carnival opened.

"The midway was deserted except for them and a few others," he said. "The four of them gave me their tickets and I told them what I tell everybody else: 'Be careful in there. Anything can happen — and will!' I was only joking but my words turned out to be prophetic."

"Anybody can get through the house in 10 minutes no matter how slow they are.

"Twenty minutes after these people went in I figured something was wrong and took off after them. But they weren't there."

Brebart and a colleague who manned the fun house exit called police, who concluded that it would have been impossible for the family to have exited without being seen.

"It's eerie," said Lt. Dragon, "but you see these scenes fiction movies about parallel universes and wonder if these people somehow left this world and wound up there."

Frail Frank LeMay may weigh just 98 pounds — but he's an amazing indestructible man who is still alive and kicking after being hit twice by cars, run over by a train, shot by a hunter, knifed by a robber, struck by lightning and bitten by a rattlesnake.

And two days after being interviewed by this reporter, the accident-prone father of two fell from a third-floor hotel balcony — and broke his leg.

"I've got more pins and screws holding me together than a robot," said the incredibly durable barber who has broken nearly every bone in his body at least once. Frank, 39, has ...

HUNTER shot him in the shoulder!

A fractured skull put him in a coma for eight weeks and he almost lost his left foot because of a deadly rattler bite. "I get upset when someone tells me how lucky I am to be alive," Frank repeated. "Most of my friends are still alive and they haven't suffered like I have. They're the lucky ones."

Fragile Frank's string of accidents began 19 years ago when he was run over by a car in a crosswalk and had to have his spleen removed. Two weeks after his release from a hospital in Tampa, he was crushed between two cars in a parking lot. "I was laid up with a broken hip and arm for several weeks and I still feel the effects of that accident," he said.

LIGHTNING bolt struck him in the back!

Since 1983, unlucky Frank has spent a total of 11 months in various hospitals recuperating from ... [illegible] ... shot mistook him for a wild hog and shot him in the shoulder five years ago. "I felt when the round hit me and landed about two feet from a 6-foot rattler who bit me twice in the foot," Frank said. "Is that the pits or what?"

Doctors were able to patch up the wound with no aftereffects, but his foot swelled up "bigger than a football."

"I thought for sure I was going to lose it," he said.

Frank was a passenger in a car that stalled on the tracks. The freight train pulverized the car and killed the driver.

Battered Frank is paying through the nose for health insurance even though none of the accidents were his fault. But he can't get life insurance.

After just 1 year in an insane asylum!

Woman who shrunk cheating husband goes free!

By Dick Dunyon
Staff writer

A jealous wife who shrunk her skirt-chasing hubby to the size of a toy doll and stuffed his corpse in a 5-gallon pickle jar has been declared sane and released from a mental hospital.

Francisca Vega was arrested, tried and found insane by reason of insanity a year ago after her long missing hubby was discovered in the pantry of her home near Barcelona, Spain.

"He was sitting in the jar stark naked with his head tilted back and his mouth wide open. He looked like a fat little baby with a man's face," a police inspector said at the time.

She kept him in a jar like pickled herring!

Francisca underwent psychiatric treatment for a year at a sanitarium in Barcelona, before hospital officials convinced a judge she was sane.

"My husband Javier was a good man but he cheated on me once too often," Francisca said. "I had to make him pay for that."

Javier was 48 when he mysteriously disappeared in 1984. Francisca told everyone she caught him with another woman and kicked him out.

"No one who knew Javier doubted his wife," said Police Inspector Emilio Martinez. "He peddled every woman who looked at him twice. He couldn't hold a job, he drank too much and abused his wife and kids."

But Francisca had poisoned her unfaithful mate and shrunk him down to pickle-jar size.

"I learned the shrinking technique while working for research chemist Dr. Pablo Salas, who experimented with the process while visiting a tribe of headhunters in Burneo," she said.

Francisca then dumped her husband's body in the bathtub and gradually reduced his size by bathing his corpse in a special mixture of chemicals for 20 weeks.

"He eventually was small enough to fit in the jar which I filled with formaldehyde and sealed," Francisca said proudly.

"I wanted his corpse to be my trophy. He made me a laughingstock."

Her shrunken husband might not have been discovered if firemen hadn't responded to a grease fire in Francisca's kitchen. Those who know Francisca best say a year in the hospital hasn't cured her jealous rage.

"She is a woman you don't cross unless you want to end up like her husband," one

The cans were labeled "Congressional Guts" and came with a note that read: "This is what you need to make some real decisions, to get this country moving again."

"I travel a lot, I do talk shows," said Lesko. "And the people are the need to make a sacrifice, to change things.

"But it seems that Congress and the White House just want to give everybody $300 as if that's going to change the world."

Space alien baby found in jungle!

ARTIST'S REINTERPRETATION of the space alien child as described to him by Dr Spiller

A Swiss scientist claims to have found an extraterrestrial baby that was abandoned in the Brazilian jungle!

By MARK SING
Correspondent

Dr. Burton Spiller said the tot appears to be 14 to 16 months old and is in surprisingly good health.

The boy bears some resemblance to a human baby.

But his large pointed ears and enormous colorless eyes strongly suggest that his parents did not come from this planet.

"This is the scientific find of the century," Dr Spiller told reporters in the Amazon River city of Anari.

"This child is living proof that intelligent life exists somewhere other than Earth.

"For reasons we may not ever understand someone has delivered him to us."

Dr Spiller says he found the baby in a jungle clearing on March 11. The anthropologist originally thought the strange-looking baby might be the deformed or retarded.

But as soon as the child recovered from hunger and exposure it became apparent that the baby was the healthy offspring of a being from another distant planet.

Dr Spiller refused to say where the baby has been taken. But a close associate told reporters that the child is being sheltered in a military facility south of Anari.

American officials were also close-mouthed.

They refused to comment on reports that they are working with the child.

But Washington sources today corroborated it by saying that Brazilian and American scientists "have always cooperated on scientific research and will continue to do so in the future."

Dr Spiller added: "The child does not appear to possess any special powers but he is quite strong for his age.

"Of course, he is under observation by scientists around the clock. And we are learning more about him every day.

"He also speaks fluently — but in a language that we have not yet been able to understand.

Man hooks 36-lb. piranha in his backyard pond!

His neighbors thought he was crazy, but fisherman Trent Boynton swore he saw a fish in his backyard pond that was at least a yard long — and he finally proved his point by catching the creature, a 36-pound piranha.

Boynton, who lives near Tucson, Ariz., said he released 50 piranha fish three years ago, but none of his neighbors believed him. He said the fish ate table scraps he threw into the pond behind his house.

HARD TIMES HIT HOLLYWOOD BIMBOS!

A bimbonic plague is sweeping Hollywood as gals are toddling off to Tinseltown seeking fame and fortune, now that their jobs have been wiped out by the great recession. Hinterland flesh fans say they've never seen anything like it. "It's like like imitating art," said one studio people watcher. "It's like an old MGM movie flick chucks from the sticks, the Ava Gardner-Lana Turner story all over again."

What makes this invasion different is the sheer numbers of would be starlets storming the movie mecca. "The ditzy darlings get off the hound at the downtown Greyhound Station," says a La-La talent scout. "Some of them look like they've been riding the bus their whole lives. BREAKER, BREAKER!

Birmingham woman [redacted] been dead for 10 years — but they chat every night!

By [redacted]
Special Correspondent

Robert Chapin's wife died 10 long years ago but he swears that he speaks to her every day on his citizen's band radio!

And as farfetched as the 61-year-old pools [illegible] might sound, at least one paranormal researcher is convinced that they are united in [illegible]. Dr Sharon Downes says that he has [illegible] and recorded the [illegible] often crackling [illegible] on nightly on the 40 [illegible] radio. And many experts have confirmed that the tapes match up perfectly with recordings [illegible] that Kim Chapin made before she had a heart attack and died in 1982.

"I've heard the voices on the CB dozens of times and there isn't a doubt in my mind that she is in fact Kim Chapin," said the expert.

She's been dead for 10 years now. But she's still corresponding with her husband from beyond the grave — for [illegible] "I'll say there is [illegible] being enough for us to [illegible] all studies are [illegible] be able to find a way for people everywhere to speak with the dead."

The weird drama began to unfold on Christmas Eve last year. Chapin said he was feeling blue and tuned in on the 40 channel CB base station that he kept in the den of his home since the radios were popular in the 1970s.

The Birmingham, Ala., man said he heard nothing but static on the radio as he tuned in channel after channel. But suddenly a faint voice said, "Hello, Bob. Is that you?"

"I didn't know what to make of it at first but I started talking anyway," said Chapin. "I identified myself as Jack Rabbit — that's my handle — and said, 'What's your handle?'"

"The voice hesitated for a moment before saying, 'Don't you know your own wife? Talk to me, Robert. It's Kim.'"

"You could have knocked me over with a feather," continued Chapin. "I do know my wife's voice and it distinctly was her. She even called me by my pet name, Papa Bear, which nobody but Kim knew."

The couple's first conversation [illegible] lasted for [illegible] and [illegible] he was doing and told him that she was happier than ever.

Now that Kim Chapin has managed to join Mrs. Chapin in ghostly every night. And while most of their conversations are painfully short and mundane, the woman has promised Bob she'll tell him that the afterlife is a wonderful place that's free of pain, disease, wall and worry — a literal paradise where the souls of the dead live in perfect peace and harmony forever.

Dr. Downes said, "This kind of thing happens more often than you might think. The scientific literature tells of people who have spoken to dead loved ones over telephones and typewriters and in some cases, have seen them on their TVs."

"The difference is that Mr. Chapin has been speaking to his dead wife daily for months. In most cases the communications are more one-sided. They usually have never met it never happens again."

Chapin hopes that Mrs. Chapin can give paranormal experts enough insight into the phenomenon to make it possible to design a radio that everyone could use to speak with people in the afterlife.

"It's certainly worth a try."

1940s bathing suits are BACK — & it's about time, says Ed!

I'm happier than Humphrey Bogart with a bottle of gin that 1940s fashions are making a big comeback with American women this year.

But the best news of all for us guys is that those late great bathing suits of yesteryear are already popping up on beaches everywhere.

I'm talking about those Esther Williams bathing suits that left something to the imagination instead of those obscene bikinis and things that guys like to wear in Florida and California.

I must have watched every swimming pool movie Esther Williams ever made at least twice. Now there was a REAL woman. And boy could she fill out a bathing suit!

Let's face it. Since they made that stupid Brook Shields movie with Premier Brooke Shields movie with Premier Avalon and Annette Funicello back in 1965, women have been shunning too much skin on the beach.

And it's high time we got back to those traditional values and bathing suits that made America great.

And not only that, but these 1940s bathing suits will go a long way toward putting Americans back to work.

It takes too many as many workers to make these 1940s suits because they use a lot more cloth and are harder to sew. You could move about 50 seamstresses all the assembly line for every one of these classic bathing suits. And there's no end in sight. Those ugly women can wear one of these suits at the pool or beach without making people sick.

That's because these suits are designed to cover up a lot of the ugly parts we all have. Saggy bosoms, cellulite, age spots and sagging parts all stay under wraps and out of sight where they belong.

In short, if you don't believe me, trying watching a 90 year old, 300 pounder waddling down the beach in a bikini or thong.

That'll send more people heading for their cars than a lightning storm by zoom.

But what makes me so pig headed mad is that those yappy swimsuit editors are sure to raise a ruckus about these new 1940s suits. That's because most of these girls are so ugly they're banned from most beaches.

But here's a chappy Ed Anger salute to all the women out there who'll wear a 1940s bathing suit this summer.

Crooks confess sins to priest — then rob him!

Two down and out crooks confessed their many sins to a Canadian priest — and then robbed him of $684.

"Forgive me but I have a big old income" one of the hoodlums confessed to the priest in the confessional booth of the church here.

The priest had just said afternoon mass at a Catholic church in Holt, Quebec, when two well-dressed men walked in and said they wanted him to hear their confessions.

"One of the men was very nervous and agitated so he [illegible] hear his confessional," Fr. Dufour told police.

The priest was returning to his office a few minutes later when the two men whipped out revolvers and demanded his money.

"They told me that it was God's work, but they weren't talking on the up and up," the priest told police.

The robbers jumped into a waiting car driven by an accomplice and roared away. Fortunately for the church, the priest was able to get the license number. A third man who fled on foot was caught later. The stolen money was recovered.

Police identified two of the suspects as brothers Edmond and Marcel Gauthier of Montreal, and a 17-year-old youth who drove the getaway car.

COMA BOY, 5, VISITS HEAVEN FOR 3 MONTHS!

PIETRO said he got to heaven by walking through a big tunnel of light

LITTLE Pietro Volpato in a snapshot taken in 1990.

By SUSAN HUTSON

For three long months, Pietro Volpato lay in a deep coma in a hospital bed — while his spirit was in heaven visiting with dead relatives!

And incredibly when the 5-year-old boy awakened from his comatose state, he knew details about the lives of his relatives who died before he was born, including a favorite song of his grandmother's that he had never heard before.

"I went through this big tunnel of light and got to heaven and it's a beautiful place," the little Italian boy told his father Luciano when he came out of his coma. "It was full of sunshine and music and I wanted to stay there.

"But they told me to go back to the other world because my mama and papa were waiting for me. I did what they told me to do."

Psychologist Victor Milano is convinced that he did go to heaven.

"He never knew most his grandparents but he correctly stated that his grandfather walked with a slight limp and had a habit of tapping on his ear when he talked. He also described an unusual birthmark that his grandmother had on her arm.

"I have spoken with the boy's father and I am convinced that he couldn't possibly have known these things unless he was in fact, met his grandparents in heaven."

Pietro was severely injured when he was struck by a car while riding his bicycle. He was in a coma when he arrived at the hospital and doctors held out little hope for him.

But day after day, week after week, the boy recovered and his parents began to believe he might make it. They prayed for him to awaken and tell them what it was like in heaven who sent the child home.

One morning while Luciano sat at his son's bedside, Pietro hailed them regained consciousness.

"I have been in a strange place, daddy," the boy said. "It was Paradise and I met people who told me they have been dead for a long time. I was very happy there.

"It was always light there and I heard the sweetest music that followed me wherever I went. I met grandpa and grandma there. They were just like the pictures we have."

Pietro spoke over and over playful with him, the songs they sang. He had learned a favorite song of his grandmother's, a little lullaby in her native Neapolitan dialect which Pietro had never heard.

"I remember my mother singing the lullaby to me when I was a baby," said Luciano. "I never sang it for Pietro yet he knew it word for word after he came back from his coma.

"Something happened in those three months he was unconscious — something that points to the church's idea after death. My son was with my dead parents and they sent him back for my sake."

Fat can kill your sex drive – and other fabulous facts

You don't lose fat cells when you shed weight — they just get smaller and fat can diminish your sexual appetite. These are just some of the fascinating facts about fat — which can be both a blessing and a bugaboo.

Your body has two kinds of fat — essential fat and storage fat, say experts.

Essential fat is vital to your health, while too much storage fat does nothing but weigh you down and contribute to various illnesses.

The average college-age man is about 15 percent body fat. A woman the same age is about 28 percent fat.

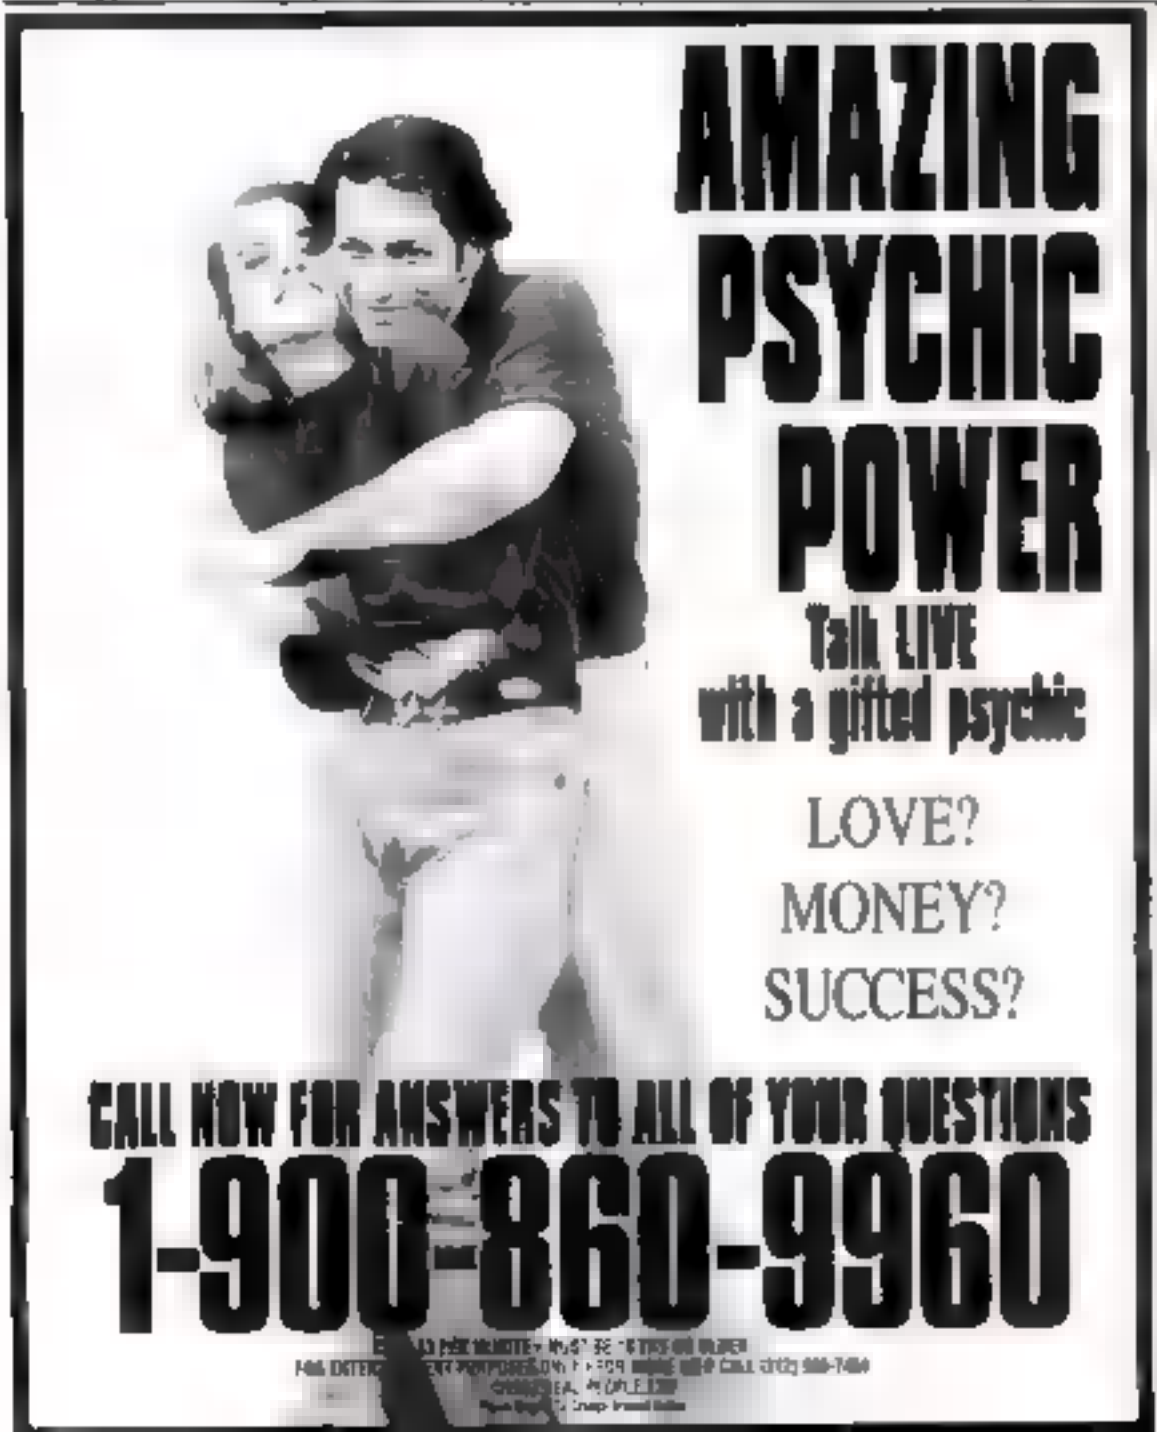
It's estimated that 72 million Americans are overweight — and more and more experts are becoming convinced the problem could be inherited.

"One investigator found that the slender parents in his sample never produced a fat child, while the very obese parents never produced a slender one," said weight-loss specialist Dr. Richard Hubert, Ph.D.

Fat cells serve as storage tanks for fat. When you lose weight they grow smaller — but the number of cells doesn't decrease.

What may decrease, however, is sexual appetite. Research indicates obese patients have remarkably little sexual interest.

What's the best way to get rid of unwanted fat? Specialists say there are two good methods: behavior modification therapy, which teaches people to permanently change their eating habits, and a combination of diet and exercise.



Matchmaker for the dead!

A Chinese peasant was an upset when his brother died a bachelor that he dug up a woman's corpse and kissed with it under his arm for eight long days — so he could bury the lady in his brother's grave!

In China, it's considered unlucky to die without a wife to share your final resting place.

Dear Humiliated in Wapakoneta: That's what you get for picking your nose in a phone booth!

Dottie will answer your letters — and call if she is in. Just write to her, c/o Weekly World News, 600 South East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33462.

Dear Dottie: I recently asked you to help me cope with an insatiable desire to molest children and you cruelly told me to put a gun to my head and pull the trigger. What kind of monster are you, lady?

I was asking for help and you rejected me. Well, I hope you're happy. I bought myself a .38 special and I've decided to use it.

In fact, by the time you read this, I'm probably be dead. — Homicidal in Houston

Dear Homicidal: You're not a bit of guilt to put a guilt trip on me after all the nonsense you've dumped on me with your so-called "letters." I stand by my original statement, creep. Case closed!

I may be a big fat slob — but I'm your BIGGEST fan!

Dear Dottie: I know that you don't like fat people and I've often wondered why. Have we ever done anything to hurt you? I don't think so. So why do you hate us and call us names? Please respond to my letter. Even if you don't like fatties like me, I'm one of your biggest fans. — Pat in Cleveland

Dear Pat: The only fat people I dislike are those who whine and cry about their "condition" and never do anything about it. Sounds like you — who clearly have a good self image and the guts to accept yourself for what you are — pity TOPS in my book. And don't ever forget it!

Should I have a sex change 'cause my wife turned gay?

Dear Dottie: Three months ago my wife of 11 years decided to become a lesbian. I still love her madly, Dottie, and I'm actually thinking about having a sex change operation so that I can satisfy her new sexual preferences. Needless to say, this would be drastic. Can you think of any alternatives to a sex change? Any help you can give me will be appreciated. — Undecided in Tucson

Dear Undecided: A sex change is much too drastic. Why don't you try a brain transplant instead?

Her name's on my chest but she gave me the air!

Dear Dottie: I fell head over heels in love with a girl a few years ago and she persuaded me to have her name, Ida, tattooed on my chest. That was the good daddy until she told me that we're through because she's decided to marry another man! Losing Ida I can deal with, Dottie, but this tattoo is going to give me big problems when I try to find a new girl. I don't have the cash to have it taken. Somehow I have to get rid of it. Please help me! — Desperate in New York

Dear Desperate: The only I see if you can do one of two things. Find another girl named Ida — or have the letters "H" and "I" added to your tattoo and tell everybody you're from The Pelvis State!

Will my pretty little poems ever make me rich?

Dear Dottie: I've written a collection of poems and need someone to evaluate them for me. Would you look them over and tell me what you think? As you can see, they're all about nurses and the wonder of life. Please let me know as soon as you can. I'll be sending them to a publisher soon. — Poet in Omaha

Dear Poet: I hate to tell you this, pal-head, but your poems stink!

Brains stolen from bodies of crash victims!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

Shocked cops arrived at the scene of a gruesome three-car crash to find seven bodies of accident victims — all with their brains missing!

Authorities in Darwin, Australia, admit they have no clues in the bizarre incident, in which the dead were found with their skulls neatly pried open and the contents surgically removed.

"We have no idea who did this or why," said Det. Lieut. Grainger of the Darwin police department. "We don't even know at this time whether the accident victims were dead or alive when their brains were removed.

Their skulls were pried open and the contents removed, say shocked cops

"As far as we know there are no markets for human brains. We've checked with medical schools and they have plenty on new organs since the time of the accident. At this time we believe we're dealing with a disturbed person, someone who harvests brains or a very sick mugger, someone who has had training in surgical procedures."

According to Grainger, police received an anonymous call on March 21 reporting a three-car accident on the outskirts of the city. Six adults and two children were found dead on the scene, while another — and were stunned at what they found.

Lying on the pavement were the bodies of two children, three women and two men. The victims had suffered various injuries but all showed the same bizarre head wound. One person that stretched across the forehead from one ear to the other. Brain matter and the skulls of six of the victims.

"At first our officers assumed these were head injuries from the accident. But the medics realized right away what had happened," said Grainger. "They checked and found that there was absolutely no brain matter left in the skulls of six of the victims.

"Since the accident we have performed autopsies on the victims — members of a New Zealand family travelling in Australia. We have tried to trace the original telephone call to our emergency line, but with no success.

"We have examined the accident scene for any tracks, fingerprints or footprints, but have come up with no clues. Now we're appealing to the public to help us find out what happened."

Grainger suspected that any witnesses or people with information about the accident will be reluctant to come forward because they fear they will be suspected of the crimes.

RMER PUTS SNEAKERS ON

A wacky farmer has outfitted his cows, pigs, goats, horses and chickens with custom-made sneakers to relieve the stress of being on their feet all day.

"My neighbor shoed the road cleats I put together on the horses, but I can see a big difference in most of my stock since they've been wearing sneakers," said Herman Dubois, who has a 200-acre spread northwest of Sedona, Ariz.

The veteran farmer says he's been very impressed and it shows in their milk.

"The hens are laying more and the hogs are getting a better price than ever before," he adds.

"I don't wear dress shoes on the farm because they're not comfortable," he said.

"I feel better and work better wearing something easier on my feet. I figured the same might be true for my livestock."

So Herman had sneakers specially fitted for his 100 head of cows, 200 chickens and 30 hogs. He has horses, two donkeys and two goats, also. Even custom-fitted sneakers. The shoes serve as shock absorbers and relieve some of the pressure on their hooves.

"The shoes cost me a small fortune but they are worth every penny of it," said Herman.

"The chickens were the most difficult to fit and the most expensive because of their unusual feet, but they seem to like them and don't try to peck them off.

"But it's a different story with the horses.

"I may have to go back to their old shoes. They don't seem as frisky and don

The recession is bringing families back together!

Inflation and the uncertain economy are forcing young adults to move back with their parents or stay with them longer, say experts.

"Younger people generally who are trying to get established, are finding that costs are astronomical," said economist Dr Fred Allison. "As a result, growing numbers of young adults are moving back with their parents or are not leaving home in the first place."

Back in the 1960s and 1970s young people were mostly able to enter the economic mainstream, he said.

"They had easy access to the good jobs. And consequently they were less influenced by their parents. This drove the family apart and contributed to erosion of religion in our society. It also gave young people a false sense of security.

"But the young people coming into the economic mainstream today are confronting daunting home prices, high interest rates, higher taxes and big energy bills. Economic independence is being made increasingly difficult."

However, today's economic uncertainty and high prices could actually benefit our society, explains Dr Frank Caprio, noted marriage and family counselor. "Children who might want to fly the family nest are thinking twice about it now because they know how tough it is in the outside world," said Dr Caprio.

"I think as inflation surges children will stay at home longer — and that's good for everyone. It hangs out first on the ground and gives us a common bond."

Computer nerd jumps off 14-story school

SHOCKING PHOTO!

HERO Stephen McDonald, reviled before he hit the pavement

. . . after teacher gave him a 'C'

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Special correspondent

Computer genius Stephen McDonald threw himself off the roof of his college dormitory in despair — because he got a 'C' in his computer graphics course!

The distraught teen leaped from his perch atop a 14-story building screaming at the top of his lungs and died instantly upon hitting the parking lot below.

"All the kids called him a nerd and it was getting him down," said police Capt. Henry Watkins of the Wellington, New Zealand, police department.

"He did nothing but work on his computer day and night and the other students thought he was a hopeless geek.

"Then after all the abuse he took for studying so hard, he wound up with a lousy 'C' and it was more than he could stand. He left a note saying he wanted to end it all, went up on the dorm roof and climbed up on the parapet. They tried to talk him down, but he was too upset to listen. His last words were 'I'm just a no-good nerd.' That's what he was screaming as he went down."

Stephen, 19, was a sophomore majoring in computer sciences at the Wellington community college at the time of his death. The youth was a loner who rarely socialized with other kids at his school and was never invited to campus events, witnesses say.

He had never had a date and was rarely seen anywhere but in class, in his dorm room or at the library studying.

"He was considered to be a nebbish, a computer creep who never thought about having fun or going out or anything," said Robert Pitman, a fellow student.

"He was always talking about how much he knew about computers. He was always ... [illegible] ... or word processors. No one really got to know him, no one really chummed around with him. But no one wanted this to happen to him.

"He wasn't a bad guy — just a nerd, that's all."

The dead boy's family say he telephoned often complaining of homesickness and loneliness.

They say he felt the other college students looked down on him and that he was very depressed about it.

But it was his low grade in computer graphics that pushed him over the edge, his mother said.

"In his note he said that if he was going to be a computer nerd, at least he ought to be a good computer nerd," Capt. Watkins said.

"And with that 'C,' he felt he wasn't even able to do that."

He survived an assassin's bullet in 1963 and now he answers the question America has been asking for 29 years...

WHO REALLY SHOT JFK?

Weekly World News, in its Aug. 21, 1990 issue (top) shocked the world with the revelation that JFK did not die in Dallas in 1963 after editors received a letter from a neurosurgeon who had been caring for the wounded President in a nursing center in Poland. Now JFK breaks his 27-year silence and tells who really was behind the botched assassination!

By MICKEY McGUIRE/ Correspondent

Former President John F. Kennedy, still very much alive, revealed for the first time the identity of his would-be assassin, and he points the finger of guilt at the last person on Earth anyone would ever suspect — his brother Bobby!

"He hated me," the snowy haired ex-President told neurosurgeon Sonya Paran, who is credited with saving him life after the failed assassination attempt in Dallas.

"He was obsessed with the idea that no matter what he did, how hard he worked, he was always left standing in my shadow. He would always be JFK's little brother. It warped his mind.

"And when I became President, something snapped. From that point on, he wished me dead, and he began laying his plans.

"He knew that if I was assassinated, public outrage would make the Kennedy name unbeatable. He believed that once I was out of the picture, the White House was his. And it almost was.

"But he got cocky, careless. He forgot that there are a lot of kooks and wackos out there with their own personal hates and obsessions. And one of them did to him in Los Angeles what he tried to do to me in Dallas. Like they say, what goes around comes around."

'BOBBY DID IT!'

Kennedy's words to Dr. Paran — the brilliant neurosurgeon who saved Kennedy's life and later revealed that he had not died in the hail of bullets fired at his motorcade in Dallas that dark day in November 1963.

Weekly World News carried Dr. Paran's exclusive story, along with photos of an aging, white-haired Kennedy, in its Aug. 21, 1990 edition.

In an unsolicited letter to The NEWS, Dr. Paran told how Kennedy, alive but critically wounded in the failed assassination attempt, was secretly flown to Poland where he eventually recovered.

Though paralyzed and confined to a wheelchair, Kennedy is said to be in good health and spirits at a secret location in Poland.

"Living like this — with my friends and loved ones believing I'm dead — hasn't been easy," said Kennedy, who refused to say how he knew that Bobby, and Bobby only, had masterminded the attempt on his life. "But I did it so long as it served my purposes. And I kept quiet about Bobby for the same reason. Now it's time to break my silence.

"An attempt on my life would have come as a surprise to no one, least of all me. A lot of special interest people hated me — Castro, J. Edgar Hoover, Nixon, LBJ. But I knew there was one person who wanted me dead more than all the others put together. And I knew it would only be a matter of time before he had a clear shot at me.

"When he learned I was definitely going to Dallas, he laid his plans. Some friends in the CIA got him in touch with Oswald and a sharpshooter the Company (CIA) used for some missions.

"Oswald was assigned to the Schoolbook Depository and the sharpshooter went behind the wall on the grassy knoll. Oswald was to be the fall guy and Jack Ruby, an ex-CIA operative, was enlisted to kill him before he could talk.

"Then Ruby was supposed to be killed in a shootout in the police garage.

"That didn't happen, but Ruby never figured out that he'd been double-crossed.

"Bobby's plan was incredible in its simplicity. Originally, he planned that I would be killed in Dallas. Then, after the assassination, he would have the Secret Service kill Oswald and the sharpshooter. Ruby would be framed for killing Oswald, and the sharpshooter would be found dead in a motel room with a gun in his hand.

"Bobby handed that job to Lyndon Johnson, who, naturally, had planned that himself. LBJ, Bobby handed him a letter in the White House and LBJ was in.

"It was the handing candy to a baby.

"Everything went along as planned except for one thing — I didn't die. A wax dummy was buried in my place and I went to Poland. Bobby went to his grave thinking I was buried under that Eternal Flame in Arlington.

"Now Bobby's dead, LBJ is dead, and Oswald, Ruby and a lot of others are dead. And here I am, alive! It's funny how things can turn out. But it's really sad about Bobby. He would have made a good president...in time."

Tasty milkshakes made of mashed termites cure everything

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Clever chef Kai Thee-Chye serves up the tastiest milkshakes in town and crackpot customers line up around the block to gulp 'em down — knowing full well that the savory shakes are made from squished termites!

And daytime diners at Kai's Sputtering Horse restaurant swear the bug guts and ice cream concoction not only tastes terrific, it cures everything from hemorrhoids to hangovers to boot.

"I used to be very sickly all the time with colds and sleep and terrible attacks of gas, but now I drink the termite shakes twice a day and I've never felt better," potbellied businessman Mak Trui told reporters in Beijing, China.

"My friends and I started drinking them because the restaurant is close to where we work and they taste so good. None of us believed Kai's ad where he said the things would make us feel great, too.

"But now we have tried it and we know that squashed termites are the best medicine in the world."

Crafty Kai started whipping up his scrumptious critter shakes after Chinese scientist Yang Sigi told his countrymen that termites have magical powers and that nothing down a few would cure anything that ails you.

"My business wasn't doing so good and I was living in that small wood apartment over the restaurant," the eatery owner recalled.

"And when I read about the termites, I thought what a great idea — I've got a whole attic full of those things right in my own house.

"I figured if I gathered them up, I could make a great dish out of them and keep them from eating my house at the same time."

So crafty Kai started blending the little wood munchers into milkshakes, ran a couple of ads in the newspaper — and laughed all the way to the bank as pasteurized patrons began beating down his door to buy 'em.

"To tell you the truth, I've never tried one myself because I don't like eating bugs," said the shameless shakemaker. "But my customers insist they're delicious and that if you're sick, they'll make you well just like that.

"I had one guy tell me my milkshakes cured his prostate cancer and a woman said she was going bald till the shakes made her hair come back. I've heard so many stories like that, I'm beginning to think the cure's all in something."

"I'm not telling anybody how I make them," he said. "I've got a family to support and I'm not about to let anybody else get rich off my hard work."

Boss's sex joke backfires — woman gets his job!

By DICK DONOVAN, Staff writer

New York Transit Authority executive Ron Contino made a costly mistake when he made a sexist remark to his female assistant — he got demoted and she got his job!

Contino was bumped down to assistant to the vice president in charge of Special Projects, while Velva Edwards, the target of the sexist dart, is now the new senior vice president in charge of surface transportation -- the job Contino had held since June 1990.

And to make doubly certain 56-year old Contino got the message that sexist shenanigans are not acceptable, a shopping $10,000 was lopped off his $130,000 annual salary.

Contino's fall in the sketch problem began while he was recuperating at home from heart surgery. In remarks carried by speaker phone to 25 members of his staff, he bragged that he would prove his virility when he returned to work.

"Get an auditorium that will hold all the surface managers," he said. When Mrs. Edwards asked why Contino explained, "So you, you and Pat can have sex on the stage."

The "Pat" he referred to is Patricia O'Brien, the general manager of the Authority's Manhattan bus operations.

The remark launched two investigations that resulted in the adoption of a new sexual harassment policy.

"It was a contemptuous remark that's demeaning to women," Transit Authority President Alan Kiepper declared.

"We felt it was necessary to send a strong message, and do it to Ron, but to the whole organization that the old boy way of doing things is not acceptable."

Contino has apologized to Mrs. Edwards, a 36-year-old mother, and told his bosses that his comment was an ill attempt at humor.

"He can't push this under by saying it was a joke," Kiepper said. "A lot of demeaning things are said under the guise of being a joke.

"We have to become more sensitive to what we say."

Contino is the first employee demoted for sexual harassment since the Transit Authority formally banned it in 1984.

CONSOLING gesture: Velva Edwards, who was given a promotion after being harassed that he'd have sex with her and another woman.

SORRY: Ron Contino has apologized for his sexist remark, but his employer docked him money — and cut his pay by $10,000.

TIPS FOR SINGLES

If you're determined to make it down the aisle, marriage expert Beatrice Bruno has some tips for you — a few pointers she believes will improve your chances of finding a mate.

Be realistic. If you're fat, aging, bald and unemployed, don't expect a pretty young woman to fall at your feet.

Know what you want. Make a list of what's really important to you, and what you're willing to compromise on.

Meet new people. Join groups, place ads, sign up with dating services. And if a date doesn't work out, don't give up — get that person to introduce you to his friends and co-workers.

Accept people as they are. In order for a relationship to work, people have to feel comfortable being themselves.

HANNIBAL the Cannibal (Anthony Hopkins) in Silence of the Lambs.

By [illegible] Staff writer

In a chilling reenactment of the hit film Silence of the Lambs, David Loreus cut off his mom's head and drenched himself in her blood — because he thought he was a real-life "Hannibal the Cannibal," cops say.

The 34-year-old unemployed man attacked his wheelchair-bound mother Jean in the hallway of their Parkville, Md., home, cops said. The victim, 57, called her sister for help but when authorities arrived she was already dead.

"When police and paramedics arrived David let them in," said Police Sgt. Steve Doerrenberger. "She was lying decapitated in the hallway and he was covered with her blood.

"The neighbors heard him yelling that he was Hannibal the Cannibal as he was taken to the paddy wagon. He has been charged with first-degree murder."

Neighbors and family members had spoken that David had been released from [illegible]ution only last December. He had been living with his mother, who suffered from multiple sclerosis, in her home on the outskirts of Baltimore.

A sister of the dead woman reported that Jean Loreus had called her shortly before she died on March 15 and that she sounded strange. The sister called 911, thinking Jean had fallen out of her wheelchair.

"We think now that the attack was going on right then," said Sgt. Doerrenberger. "David has a history of problems with schizophrenia. He is now in a mental hospital undergoing tests to see if he is competent to stand trial."

GHOST PHOTOGRAPHED!

This photo snapped by Susie Kelsey is an astonishing glimpse into the spirit world — and it's the first one ever taken that's been authenticated by experts as the real thing!

After being examined by an expert panel of scientists, it was proved beyond a shadow of a doubt the photo is the real thing.

"I examined the negative and subjected it to a rigorous battery of testing that included computer enhancement and photo microscopic examination," said Marshall George, an expert on computerized photo analysis who worked for the Pentagon from 1972 to 1978.

"I'm convinced it's a picture of a real ghost. We have state-of-the-art equipment now that can tell whether a negative is genuine.

"This picture is definitely real. And as far as I know, this is the only photo of a ghost that's ever been authenticated as such."

INCREDIBLE unretouched photograph taken by Susie Kelsey shows dead man's face in window.

By KIM JENKINS
Special correspondent

Jim and Susie Kelsey got more than they bargained for when they bought a 100-year-old house — a resident ghost came along with it and they have a picture of him to prove it!

And the spirit became so attached to the family that it moved with them three times.

The Kelseys acquired their ghost when Susie found the old timer sitting up on blocks in Oakland, Nev., in April 1978. She fell in love with it and got enabled her husband to buy it. They did and moved it a few miles away to Fish Springs.

"Strange things began to happen as soon as we bought the house," said Susie. "Tools mysteriously moved from one room to another and the thermostat would get turned up to 95 degrees. We'd hear footsteps and no one would be there. That first year we just thought our imaginations were working overtime. Then one night after hearing footsteps I went to check on my two daughters but found them both in bed. My 7-year-old, Jennifer, said Marion's a boy came to me. And I asked, 'What is a little boy?' and she said, 'He is a big person.' I didn't know what to think."

"He told us our ghost's name was Samuel and that he was attracted to our youngest child, Jennifer, and he was there to watch over her," Susie said.

The psychic asked Samuel to leave because he was frightening the family and, after that, things calmed down.

This was the beginning of the Kelseys' relationship with Samuel.

In 1985 when the Kelseys moved from the old house in Fish Springs to nearby Garnerville, they figured it was the end of their dealings with Samuel. "We said goodbye to him and I figured that was the end of it," said Susie. But as I was taking pictures of her 7-week-old baby she unwittingly captured more back to their house in Fish Springs and Samuel came with them.

"The first night after we moved back into the old house all the clocks in the house stopped at the same time," said Susie.

"These were both electric and wind-up clocks."

The Kelseys stayed in Fish Springs until the summer of 1988, when they moved to Healdsburg, Calif. Once again, Samuel made the trip with them. "I was surprised when he moved with us this last [illegible] in the old house before we left. When Jennifer told me she'd moved with us I didn't believe it.

"But she said, 'Oh, yes, Mom, he came with us.' And little things that happened told me she was right."

Samuel became so much a part of the Kelseys' lives that he was just like a member of the family.

Susie even had the picture she snapped of him blown up and put it in a place of honor on the mantel, right alongside the photos of her kids.

Real warp tornado sucks up people and throws them into another time!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

Scientists around the world are scrambling to stop a horrifying new threat to humanity — a swirling, moving time warp that banishes everything it touches to the distant past or the unknown future.

The tornado like phenomenon appeared out of nowhere and is moving across China at a steady three miles per hour, and so far an estimated 800,000 peasants in Gansu province have disappeared in its wake.

Scientists say if they can't find a way to stop it sooner or later every fish, human and child on the planet may wind up living in a time and place that once was — or is yet to be.

"The Chinese government has refused to provide its people information or relevant info [illegible] them about the time warp," said Dr. Cedric Newton, a British scientist who is studying the bizarre phenomenon. "But I have asked for an international team of experts to help deal with the crisis and governments worldwide are watching the situation closely."

Newton says the mile-wide warp was first discovered three weeks ago by Chinese provincial authorities after reports from remote villages told of the disappearance of people, plants and animals in the path of a tornado like weather system. Meteorologists tried to study the phenomenon even as aboard they were dealing with a profound disturbance in the Earth's energy fields and physicists were called in.

"The Chinese found out that in the center of the tornado time stands still, but that spinning around the outer forward edge are powerful forces that push time ahead flipping it backwards and around the back edge time is pushed into the distant past," Dr. Newton said.

"So scientists studying this thing have concluded that living creatures that come in contact with it are sent to another era. Most likely they survive, but there's no way to know, really.

"Right now our main concern is to stop the warp somehow."

Newton and a half dozen scientists from France, Italy and the U.S. have observed the warp from a distance and describe it as a funnel shaped, tube like form that makes a low rumbling noise as it moves across the terrain. Living objects in its path tremble slightly as the warp approaches them, then fade into the tunnel.

After the phenomenon passes, the objects have disappeared without a trace.

Man shoots at sea lion with a staple gun!

Short-tempered Dan Hadley got himself into a lot of hot water when the National Fisheries agency saw him try to shoot a sea lion — with a staple gun!

A hot-tempered farmer shot and killed a space alien for flipping him the bird in one of the most tragic close encounters ever!

Tragic, say experts because far from making an obscene gesture, the extraterrestrial was apparently only waving a greeting sign of peace with a hand made up of two stubby thumbs on either side of a long middle finger. The creature just looked like he was flipping the bird," said UFO expert Malcolm Strump, who was one of only two people to see the alien before federal authorities seized the body and took it to an unknown location.

RICKSHAW driver Harry Tse, right, in court

Angry rickshaw driver dumps grumpy passengers over cliff!

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Cantankerous rickshaw driver Harry Tse got so ticked off at a couple of moaning passengers that he pulled to the side of a remote mountain road — and pushed the buggy over a 500-foot cliff!

Hallucinated Harry, 38, pleaded guilty to manslaughter after Hong Kong cops found the bodies of the Australian tourists near the wreckage of his rickshaw in a ravine three miles outside the city.

"I can't believe I actually killed somebody, Your Honor — but I swear those were the two meanest people I ever met in my life," the distraught driver later told the court.

"They drove me so crazy I just snapped. One minute I was pulling them along the road and the next minute my rickshaw was bouncing down the cliff — and those idiots were bouncing down the cliff right along with it."

Hapless Harry's ordeal began the morning Brisbane businessman Grady Archer and his wife Rachel, both 58, flagged him down near a rickshaw stand in downtown Hong Kong.

"We make our living hauling tourists around the city and most people are real friendly," said the bespectacled father of four.

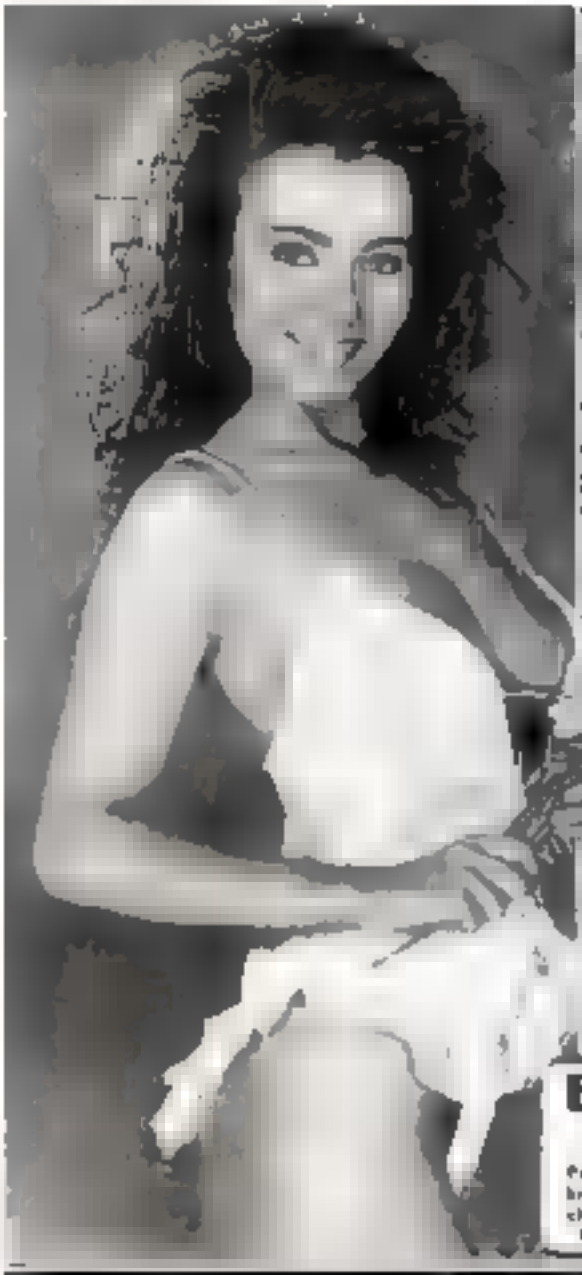
"But these two started griping and moaning and insulting me the minute they got in the cab. They kept yelling at me to watch where I'm going 'cause I'm about to get us all killed, or go faster or go slower or my rickshaw's too bumpy ... one thing after another. When they asked me to haul them out of the city and up into the mountains, I should have dumped them on their butts right there. But hell, I've got four boys to feed and I needed the money."

So hurried Harry pulled the tourists three miles up a back-breaking mountain road, listening to grumpy Grady and his battle-ax missus bitch and bellyache all the way.

"They kept wanting me to go faster so they'd get a nice breeze and I ran so hard I almost passed out," the dumbfounded dad recalled. "Then I heard one of them say, 'This Chinaman's an idiot! He doesn't know which end is up' — and that's when I dumped them five feet down the mountain."

A judge later sentenced hapless Harry to five years in prison.

"Boy, that's a long time," sighed the rattled rickshaw driver. "But honestly, I think it was worth it."



SUICIDE FLOP!

A man bell-bent on suicide leaped through a double-paned fourth-floor window but was still alive when he landed on a parked car. So he took an elevator back up to the fourth floor and jumped again — but couldn't kill himself.

"That's a total of eight floors, and other than a broken ankle and broken wrist, he's in as good shape as you or I," said Police Captain Emil Palombo.

Authorities in Kenmore, N.Y., say they'll get help for the unidentified 28-year old man, who was in fair condition at a hospital in Buffalo.

Cops said the despondent jumper had to take a running leap [redacted] fourth floor window doesn't open.

"It appears he dove headfirst through the double-paned window and landed 40 feet below on the car," Police Lieut. Ronald Sardina said. "The roof of the car buckled and the rear windows were smashed."

Dazed and bleeding from severe cuts on his face and arms, the determined young man walked back inside the building, took an elevator to the fourth floor and jumped through the broken window, police said.

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

Sardina arrived at the scene in time to see the bleeding man make his second jump.

"I saw a speaker, some blood and a lot of glass on and around the parked car," Sardina said. "I looked up and saw him at the fourth-floor window. Then he jumped."

The officer said the screaming young man was still conscious after the second leap and tried to climb off the top of the car.

"I was afraid he'd go back up and try again," Sardina said.

"It's a miracle he didn't fracture his skull or cut himself to ribbons diving through the fourth-floor window," he added. "I guess God figured it wasn't his time to go."

Police pointed out that people who fail in suicide attempts usually try again "but not in the span of two or three minutes."

How to use flattery to get ahead at work

You can get ahead on the job by flattering your boss — but you've got to do it the right way, experts say.

"Everybody likes to be flattered, and people tend to like people who make them feel good," declared Dr. Stuart Schmidt, a noted authority on organizational behavior.

Here are tips from experts on how to use flattery to influence your boss:

✓ Study your boss so you know what pleases him. Some bosses like to be friendly with the employees, others like to be more formal. Some will reward "yes men," while others like an employee who speaks his mind and gives a direct, honest opinion. "To flatter your boss, you have to present yourself in the way you think is attractive to him. False [illegible] can backfire and make the boss dislike you," said Dr. Karl Schmidt, a professor of psychology.

✓ Flatter your boss by agreeing with him. "You can get a person to like you by indicating that your beliefs and values are similar to his," Dr. Schmidt explained.

✓ Dress appropriately and neatly on the job. When you dress the way you think your boss wants you to dress, you also display your willingness to be influenced by his standards.

✓ Pay close attention to the boss. It's the most basic form of flattery. "Bosses want to feel that their workers are attending to the bosses' interests and being sensitive to their needs," Dr. Schmidt said.

For example, if your boss is a worrier, you can say to him: "Look, I know

TELEPHONE PSYCHICS AMAZE CALLERS WITH THEIR POWERS.

Experts say ordinary callers are skeptical why are discovering the amazing powers of psychics and psychic crime solvers all for the positive of the National Psychic Advisor Network.

The Luck Of The Draw.

While many believe that winning a lottery is strictly a matter of luck, having the powerful psychic Herb Dewey on your side can prove to be an enormous advantage. Just ask one Massachusetts woman who won a share of a phenomenal $110 million Megabucks with numbers she received from Dewey.

During a visit to Florida, the woman saw an advertisement for the amazing abilities of psychic Herb Dewey. Intrigued by his powers, the woman contacted Dewey on 1-900-884-5653 but admits "I didn't know he gave you numbers." After speaking with Dewey the woman decided to put the psychic's six numbers to the test. The results were beyond her wildest expectations.

"I was a little bit hysterical. I was telling Herb goodness. When I called my children none of them recognized my voice." After splitting the $110 million total with co-winners, the woman and her husband won a total of $362,344 on the quad not in 30 annual installments of $18,117. A cat rescuer for her work as a humanitarian and all thanks to Dewey's psychic insight.

The woman was so astounded by Dewey's powerful guidance she said "I think I'll go over there and thank him personally." What's even more astonishing is that she won't be alone. His psychic abilities have meaningfully benefited many before her including one man who won $10,000 playing Keno, a game based on correctly picking a group of randomly selected numbers with Herb's numbers. Speak with Herb now and number one could be the next.

Boy shrunk and kidnapped by tiny UFO

UFO victim Sun Chung-tse (before he was shrunk).

By SANDRA LEE

A basketball-size UFO shrunk a 10-year-old boy to the size of a thimble, beamed him aboard the ship and vanished into the night, China's Xinhua News Agency has reported.

The apparent abduction of Sun Chung-tse was reported with surprising candor by Xinhua, which is run by the state.

According to the report, Sun was taken aboard the glowing white UFO on the evening of April 30. Twenty minutes later passengers on two commuter flights claim to have seen a similar UFO in the sky over Xinjiang province, the [illegible]'s home.

"We have independent confirmation of aggressive UFO activity and are taking these quite seriously," said aviation spokesman Wang Yan-sheng.

"The disappearance of the boy is most disturbing. The abduction of a citizen in communist the People's Republic does not take lightly."

If there is anything government officials can do for the boy, his parents, Ying and Chou Chung-tse, said they would do it fast.

The terrified parents told Xinhua that they fear for their son's life.

"We do not understand what is happening," Chou, the boy's dad, told reporters. "One minute our son was at home with us eating rice. The next minute a fiery ball appeared just outside our doorway.

"It shined a white beam on my son and made him drop the rice," the puzzled pop said. "Then he lit up very brightly and began to shrink. When he was only a few centimeters tall the beam lifted him up to the ball of light.

"He disappeared into the ball. Then the ball just disappeared. There has been no sign of them since."

Spokesman Wang said the Chinese government will "do everything in its power" to find out what happened to the boy but did not say how it plans to go about it.

Sickest new fad ever!

Families buying videotapes of loved ones' autopsies

By JOE MEGGIS
Staff writer

Keepsake-crazy Ken Gilchrist and his wife Lila wanted one final remembrance of Ken's dearly departed dad Andy, so they coughed up big bucks — and bought a videotape of poor Andy's autopsy!

And incredibly, the ghoulish Gilchrists are just one of thousands of U.S. families who've started collecting stomach-turning tapes of their dead relatives being sliced and diced by a pathologist's knife.

"It seems really depraved to me, but doggedly everybody wants a tape of their loved ones' autopsies," said a dumbfounded Florida doc. "It's all the rage, kind of like the Hula Hoop used to be, I guess.

"I'm afraid it won't be long before people, instead of showing slides of their vacation, will be showing the neighbors videotapes of Uncle Avery being disemboweled at the morgue."

The creepy craze started last year with New York's nutty yuppies and spread west like wildfire, till every meathead mourner from Kentucky to California wanted a movie of mom's postmortem.

And when ailing Andy Gilchrist, 78, died of pneumonia in San Jose, Calif., six weeks ago, his heartsick son Ken decided he just had to have a grisly video of the autopsy.

"A bunch of guys I work with have tapes of family members' autopsies and we thought it would be the right thing to do to buy one of Dad," said the sad-happy fix salesman.

"But the county or whoever wasn't going to let us see autopsies at all because to them it was just a routine death. So we hired a private pathologist to do it in a hospital and got a professional photographer to film it from start to finish.

"The whole thing cost us more than $5,000, but now we've got it and that's what counts.

And a couple of times a week, the pathologist and his teary-eyed wife haul out the macabre movie, plug it into the VCR and watch the doc dismember dad.

"It's not easy to watch because it's awful bloody and there's just a lot of stuff that makes you queasy," said lanky Ken, 40, "I really hate the part where they peel back his scalp and shave the hair off his head.

"We watch it, though, and we'll keep on watching it — because that's our way of showing respect to a wonderful man."

And believe it or not, thousands of other celebration-crazed Americans all through autopsy flicks at least once a month — often right after dinner, remember.

But the Gilchrists' daughter Dawn, 16, says she won't catch her watching grandpa being dissected like a frog in biology class.

"To me, that's really sick," said the disgusted teen. "I can't believe Grandad would want us sitting around watching ourselves like that."

MAN FINDS HIS LOST THUMB IN THE BELLY OF A FISH!

In the most bizarre fishing yarn ever told about "the one that didn't get away," angler Bob Lindsey lost his thumb when it was severed in a boating accident. But he got it back after it was found in the belly of a trout a fisherman caught — seven months later!

"If anybody had told me that story I never would have believed it," the 38 year old father of two said. "But I knew it was my thumb the minute I saw it."

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Bob was fishing in Wyoming's Flaming Gorge Reservoir when waves swamped his boat and dumped him into the water.

The pump on the outboard engine lopped off his thumb at the knuckle but severed his index and middle fingers and shattered one of his legs.

"I thought I was a goner," he said. "About all I could do was dog paddle and I was ready to go under for the last time when a friend threw me a life preserver. I'm lucky I didn't drown. I guess somebody up there was looking out for me."

Bob, who lives in Green River and works as a welder for the Union Pacific Railroad, said he learned about his thumb when he read a newspaper story about a thumb being found in the belly of a trout caught by a man from Afton, a small community about 140 miles to the northwest.

The story said the resident's office was investigating to see if the thumb had come from a drowning victim. "So I called the coroner and told him about my accident," said Bob.

"X rays and my fingerprints proved that the thumb was mine. It was returned to me after the coroner was finished with it. I've got it in a jar on my shelf. It proves my story about the one that didn't get away.

"But I'd just as soon have it back on my hand where it belongs."

RAILROAD worker Bob Lindsey keeps his thumb in a jar. "But I'd just as soon have it back on my hand where it belongs."

Motorist dies after being thrown into tombstone with his name on it!

A young motorist died after he was buried out of a careening car and landed headfirst against a tombstone — with his name on it!

"And if you think that's weird, the accident happened on February 18 — the exact date of the death of the man buried in that grave," said a police officer in Hamden, Conn.

Marshall Damerell, 16, was alone when he rounded a curve and lost control of his Toyota. The car skidded across a grassy area and plowed through a hedgerow before Campbell was thrown against the marble headstone.

Paramedics rushed Campbell to a nearby hospital, but he died without regaining consciousness.

Police officials said they paid special attention to the grave at the time "because we were concerned with getting Mr. Campbell to a hospital," said a cop who helped investigate the accident.

But investigators couldn't believe their eyes when they returned to the scene the following day and read the inscription on the tombstone: "Marshall C. Watkins, Born Jan. 5, 1887 - Died Feb. 18, 1912."

The dead motorist lived in Alexandria, Va., and had been visiting relatives and friends in Connecticut.

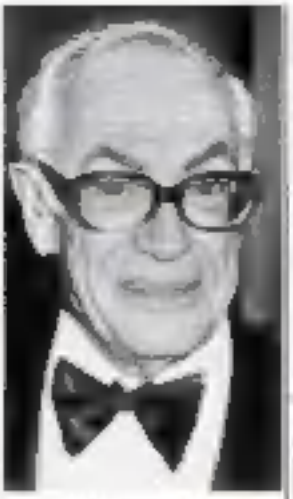
To help ailing U.S. economy...

Millionaire's ghost sends advice from beyond the grave!

By BEATRICE DEXTER / Correspondent



BUSINESS tycoon Malcolm Forbes died in 1990.

The ghost of mega-millionaire Malcolm Forbes is sending messages from beyond the grave — faxing advice to business buddies on how to improve the faltering U.S. economy!

Business leaders from around the country confirm that they have received the eerie faxes, signed Malcolm S. Forbes, and a number say the dead man's excellent suggestions have helped them reverse serious problems with their companies.

"The messages appear mysteriously on my fax machine during the night and they are a great aid to me in conducting my affairs," said one head of a multinational corporation, who asked that his name not be used.

"Forbes was an expert in business matters and America needs that expertise now. I admit I'd do anything Malcolm Forbes advised because I have tremendous respect for him. He was a sharp dealer."

When Forbes died on Feb. 24, 1990, he was one of America's most powerful men. As head of Forbes, Inc., he produced the country's top business magazine, Forbes, and wrote its widely-read business column. His personal fortune was $1.25 billion and he owned eight homes, one on his own private South Pacific island.

Forbes had a 151-foot helicopter-equipped yacht, a private 727 jet plane and an enormous collection of priceless art. He counted among his friends celebrities like Elizabeth Taylor, Calvin Klein and Richard Nixon.

Forbes' death was followed not long afterwards by a downslide in the U.S. economy with matters going from bad to worse as factories closed, contracts were lost and millions of workers were laid off from their jobs.

"Late summer the faxes began coming in, first to one business leader, then to another," a corporate head recalled.

"We all thought at first that someone was playing a trick on us — but the advice Malcolm gave was excellent, and it could only have come from someone who knew a great deal about the economy.

"Every now and then, Malcolm will add a personal note that couldn't come from anyone else but him. All of us are convinced it's his spirit talking to us from heaven. It's getting us on dogged on the knee to help us steer clear of trouble — and we're hopeful he's going to bring us back to boom times in short order."

Your ears reveal if you'll have a heart attack!

Want to know if you are a likely candidate for heart disease? Then take a close look at your earlobes — they often carry the telltale sign that coronary problems are on the way!

New research confirms a link between your earlobes and your chances for heart disease.

The experts say if your earlobe has a particular crease in it, there's an excellent chance your heart has a problem.

"Earlobe crease is a strong risk factor for coronary artery disease," declared Dr. William Elliott of the University of Washington in St. Louis, Mo.

In a 1,000-patient study, Dr. Elliott found that 74 percent with the revealing ear crease suffered from coronary artery disease, while only 16 percent of those patients without it were affected by the disease.

A possible explanation for the earlobe-heart relationship is that changes in the earlobe's arterioles (the small terminal branches of an artery) reflect similar changes in the arteries serving the heart.

The telltale crease starts where the ear attaches to the head and angles toward the back edge of the ear lobe.

The crease can be faint or deep, and may appear in one or both ears.

Devil's Triangle discovery

By SAMUEL CALDWELL
Special Correspondent

An ancient time capsule found in the Devil's Triangle in 1987 contained a papyrus scroll that foretells the course of human events until the year 2855 — and several of the events that it predicted have already come to pass!

America's war with Iraq. The San Francisco earthquake. The disintegration of the Soviet Union and the rise of outsider political candidate H. Ross Perot are just a few of the uncannily accurate predictions that have come true in the past three years alone.

As Weekly World News reported in 1987, archaeologist Mark Bauer noted that the discovery of the coral-encrusted ceramic urn off the Bahamian coast was initially thought to be a major find in itself.

But the importance of the vessel paled when X rays revealed the scroll inside. It was written in Egyptian hieroglyphics and carbon dating showed it to be between 4,000 and 4,500 years old.

Even more astonishing, the scroll contained predictions for the future, including dozens that have already come true. Among them:

NOSTRADAMUS is included in the scroll's predictions.

- The work of French seer Nostradamus, who predicted the rise of Adolph Hitler and the spread of the AIDS virus, is foretold in these scrolls.
- The discovery of the New World by Columbus in 1492.
- A bloody war in the New World, apparently a reference to America's Civil War.
- Man's development of flying aircraft. The scrolls even foretold high-speed jet planes.
- America's 1969 moon landing.
- The San Francisco earthquake of 1989.
- The disintegration of a great world power — a clear reference to the Soviet Union — in 1992.
- The emergence of a powerful new leader with no ties to conventional politics to get another world power in 1992. Yes, as billionaire H. Ross Perot, who is thinking about making a run for the U.S. presidency, hits the hill slowly, say experts.
- The devastation of an evil middle eastern nation, presumably Iraq, by an enormous meteor in 1994.
- The development of personal "flying chariots" to replace conventional wheeled vehicles — cars — in 2015.
- The end of manual labor for humans with the perfection of worker robots in 2021.
- The perfection of time travel in 2023.
- The invention of a hand-held weapon more powerful than nuclear warheads in the year 2052.
- The birth of a male child

Curiously, some of the predictions go beyond the year 2055, leading to speculation that human history might not progress beyond that point.

"It's as though whoever put this together decided to let us draw our own conclusions of what will happen after 2055," said Dr. Lee Frederick of New Zealand. "It's scary as it was because so many of the predictions have already come to pass."

Although the text was written in Egyptian hieroglyphics, it is impossible to say how the scroll got to the Bahamas without further research.

"It might be that ancient Egyptian sailors somehow made their way to the Caribbean," Dr. Frederick said.
